The case of young Cullis, the Harvard student charged with forgery, furnishes food for thought to parents. The blind policy of the father, not the inherent badness of the boy, was at fault, and it is sad that human law is weak in dealing with such a case. If the father could be straighed and made to suffer, there would be justice in that. It is difficult to see any in harsh dealing with the young fellow for an act which, morally speaking, was forced upon him.

A RECENT act of the Legislature requires the National Goard of West Virginia to go into encampment for a time this summer. Why might not the people of this community unite in an effort to have the encampment in our vicinity? Why not invite the bold boys in blue to do their mustering, their fishing and their courting on the Moundsville campground, or in the fine grove adjoining? It is as fine a location for the purpose at the sun shines on, and it would be a good thing to have the encampment.

The trial survey of the West Virginia Central Railroad from Cumberland to Engertown will run about as follows: Engine a location and encapture of the west Virginia Central Railroad from Cumberland to Engertown will run about as follows: English with the follows: the curve of Knobley mountain to a point nearly opposite the slate buff of Black's Hill and their courting on the Moundsville campground, or in the fine grove adjoining? Just now at copportunity is offered her to propel her industries and her commerce forward with an impulse which will easily maintain her lead for a generation, at least. The scheme has so many good things to recommend it, with nothing against it, that it seems unnecessary to dwell on it. The question is, will the community awake to the importance of this opportunity and make the most of it? If she does not secure this road she will realize her grave mistake when it is too late.
